Cybersecurity is a difficult and complex field. The technical, political and legal questions surrounding it are complicated, often stretching a spectrum of diverse technologies, varying legal bodies, different political ideas and responsibilities. Cybersecurity is intrinsically interdisciplinary, and most activities in one field immediately affect the others. Technologies and techniques, strategies and tactics, motives and ideologies, rules and laws, institutions and industries, power and money—all of these topics have a role to play in cybersecurity, and all of these are tightly interwoven.

The SpringerBriefs in Cybersecurity series is comprised of two types of briefs: topic- and country-specific briefs. Topic-specific briefs strive to provide a comprehensive coverage of the whole range of topics surrounding cybersecurity, combining whenever possible legal, ethical, social, political and technical issues. Authors with diverse backgrounds explain their motivation, their mindset, and their approach to the topic, to illuminate its theoretical foundations, the practical nuts and bolts and its past, present and future. Country-specific briefs cover national perceptions and strategies, with officials and national authorities explaining the background, the leading thoughts and interests behind the official statements, to foster a more informed international dialogue.

Samer would like to thank his parents, Ihsan Al-khateeb and Basima Al-Qaraghuli, and his siblings, Samar, Saja, and Hasanain Al-khateeb, for all the care and support provided to him throughout his life. He also would like to especially thank his wife Lina Al Azzawi for all the love, patience, and positive vibes given to him at the time of writing this manuscript. Nitin Agarwal would like to dedicate this book to his family and friends with much love and gratitude for everything. Without all their encouragements, this endeavor would not be possible.
